Vocational Graduate Diploma of Family Dispute Resolution

2012 Training Calendar & Information

Relationships Australia
VICTORIA

Vocational Graduate Diploma

The Vocational Graduate Diploma is structured around a three-day introductory workshop, weekly seminars and an internship placement.

The course fulfils the requirements of the Vocational Graduate Diploma of Family Dispute Resolution.

Graduates will be equipped to work in all fields of dispute resolution, with a primary focus on family law. They will also be eligible for registration with the Attorney General's Department as a Family Dispute Resolution Practitioner.

The Diploma includes a 40-hour internship, where students will actively work with clients in a supervised environment. In addition to the internship there are internship placement seminars, which will be conducted fortnightly.

The Diploma modules offered are:

- models of practice
- managing power
- developing options & agreements
- child-centred practice
- developing reflective practice.

There will be two courses run in 2012, one starting in February, and the other in July.

Prerequisites

Applicants need an appropriate degree in law or social sciences; or a Certificate IV in Community Mediation; or proven work experience in the area.

Applicants will be required to attend an interview prior to acceptance into the course.

A Recognition of Prior Learning process is available to experienced practitioners in Family Dispute Resolution (FDR).

Course fee

The cost of the course is $6,950. ($1,000 deposit is required to confirm enrolment).

Installment options are available. The deposit is non-refundable, unless one month's notice is given prior to course commencement.
